SUNDAY EDITION

E-PAPER ▼

HOME CITY NATION BUSINESS WORLD VIVACITY AVENUES SPORTS COLUMNISTS STATE EDITIONS

BREAKING NEWS

Any claim of declaring war on N Korea absurd: White House

Home » Vivacity

VIVACITY

WORDS UNCENSORED

Monday, 10 October 2016 | Saritha Saraswathy Balan

ជាជាជាជាជា

G+ Share

'When language reaches its limit or silence becomes a language' formed the core discussion in the last part of the curtain-raiser of ILF Samanvay, the annual Indian Languages Festival. By Saritha Saraswathy Balan

Celebrated contemporary artist Amitesh Grover wondered why critics give Shakespeare the credit for being the author with the largest vocabulary. Tongue-in-cheek, he even went on to calculate his own vocabulary, arguing that most contemporary writers possess a larger vocabulary than Shakespeare ever did!

The courtyard of Indian Habitat Centre in the muggy evening witnessed cheeky yet original conversations. Akansha Rastogi, another artist, spoke on the potential of a visitor who can shock the whole concept on which a painting exhibition hinges. "The anonymity that a visitor's book offers to pen one's thought is liberating," she opined. The event also saw Arnika Ahldag enact and develop individual narratives, opening them up for public interpretation.

One of the listeners suddenly interrupted the flow with her genuinely puzzled query in Malayalam -her mother tongue. "How can pople understand what is being said, if all of you keep talking in English. How fair is that?" she asked. It was then the turn of a Bengali man whose dialectical slang added an ethnic flavor to the whole dialogue.

Rastogi shared an experience of people leaving a museum in tears. "I don't know what made them cry... which work of art....Language failed," she exclaimed. Grover narrated the story of a man who used to go on walks with a tortoise in tow in Paris. He had to slow down his pace to that of his crawling companion. Grover went on to think aloud of a language whose pace could be slowed down.

The annual Indian Languages' festival -ILF Samanvay- presented the last part of its curtain-raiser series on Thursday at IHC, before its main event scheduled to be held from November 5-7. As part of the No Tongues Barred (#ntb) Art Articulation Series, ILF hosted the 'Apophenic Talks: An Enacted Conversation'. Deeksha Nath (independent critic and curator) curates the Art Articulation Series for ILF Samanvay.

The artists projected a 'language' that communicated keywords- mourning, labour and sleep, with Rastogi speaking on how the body metabolism adjusts itself to these concepts. Ahldag also tried to give a new definition to Censorship: "There is Censorship which tempts." One of the listeners pointed out that no language is complete without communication through eyes. "We do often think that words reflect language. I love Christian weddings. There, the priest works magic with the language. He pronounces you man and wife," Grover shared.

The conversation at one point came to the level of introspection where one wondered if language ever reached its limits...where no further word could be said...where silence itself becomes a language. Words, sometimes, have to take on the imagery of Silence.

The evening witnessed an interesting role-play between the audience and the artists, wherein the audience became the artist. Commenting on the event, Deeksha Nath said, "Apophenic Talks was the final event in the series #No Tongues Barred. And as such, we pay tribute to the positioning of the festival as a space for multiple voices to speak in whichever form they choose." As part of the visual art section of ILF Samanvay, the performances by Gorver, Rastogi and Ahldag set the tone for the inter-discourse spaces between various art forms that forms the highlight of the upcoming exhibition.

Dr. Rizio Yohannan Raj, Creative Director- ILF Samanvay, said, "We live in conditions where attention span is susceptible to disruptions, making us dependent on other mediums to comprehend what we have lost. Through the index of key words given to the audience, they choose their own distractions, meanings and make personal interpretations. The artists have been encouraging this realisation among the public, through sustained context-driven and art-based projects."

POST YOUR COMMENTS

MORE NEWS

- Three women 26 Sep 2017 | Pioneer
- The torchbearer 26 Sep 2017 | Suman Doonga
- Class act 26 Sep 2017 | Saimi Sattar
- Trend blazer 26 Sep 2017 | Pioneer
- The suburban mom 26 Sep 2017 | Pioneer
- * Heal and rejuvenate 26 Sep 2017 | Kritika Dua
- Reviving dying art 25 Sep 2017 | Pioneer
- The five elements 25 Sep 2017 | Pioneer
- Triumph of tradition 25 Sep 2017 | Angela Paljor
- Trend blazer 25 Sep 2017 | Pioneer

TOP STORIES -

India won't deploy troops in Afghanistan

Pak spy accuses his agency of 'protecting' terrorists: Report

Haryana Police conducts raids in Delhi for Honeypreet, Aditya Insan

Judge who ordered CBI probe in Ishrat Jahan case quits

India exposes Pakistan's use of fake photo at UN; shows image of own terror victim

We've right to shoot down US bombers outside our airspace: N.Korea

HC refuses to stay framing of charges against Tejpal

PM constitutes Economic Advisory Council

China claims more global support for Belt and Road Initiative

Be the first to comment

TALK OF THE TOWN 🦺

Comments (0)

POST

Refused open-jeep roadshow, Rahul's Gujarat campaign begins with ...

6 comments

The torchbearer

4 comments

'Mann Ki Baat' programme is for reflecting people's views: PM

4 comments

♥ Recommend 0

Arumugaswamy to head Jaya death probe

ED attaches Rs 1.16cr assets of Karti, firm allegedly linked to him

DDCA case: Kejriwal using delaying tactics, says Jaitley in

Sindhu thanks Sports Ministry for Padma Bhushan nomination

Dera chief moves HC against rape conviction

Allegations 'crazy mixture of falsehoods, conjectures': Chidambaram

SUNDAY EDITION -

VIEW ALL

'Bring home the bacon,' Merkel tells voters on eve of poll

24 Sep 2017 | AFP | Berlin

Chancellor Angela Merkel and her rival Martin Schulz rallied voters on the eve of Sunday's vote, urging Germans to shun the first hard-right party expected to enter parliament in force since the end of World War II. Merkel, the clear frontrunner after 12 years in power with a double-digit lead, also told her conservative base not to get complacent and to cast their ballots, rousing them with a folksy call to...

Read More

STATE EDITIONS -

VIEW ALL

Matikala Board to hold 'Mati ki Mehak' exhibition-cum-sale

26 Sep 2017 | Staff Reporter | Bhopal

Madhya Pradesh Matikala Board is organising 'Mati ki Mehak' exhibition-cum-sale and state level prize distribution ceremony at Gauhar Mahal on September 26. The ceremony will be inaugurated by Cottage and Gramodyog Minister Antar Singh Arya at 7 pm...

Read More

MORE

- "Musical concert held in memory of Pandit Deendayal Upadhyay at Shaheed Bhavan
- **Govt marks 8 more hosps for H1N1 treatment

Bhubaneswar Bhopal Ranchi Lucknow Chandigarh Dehradun Raipur

